DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Welcome to our production of 10 Ways to Survive the Zombie Apocalypse! We are excited for you to embark on this hilarious and action-packed journey with us! There is such humor and absurdity in this play and I couldn't think of a better group of students to bring this production to life. We have 94 students involved in this production. They've done everything from zombie-ifying clothes, creating unique zombie walks and voices, putting together numerous stage management spreadsheets, building props, blocking and choreographing scenes, and so much more.

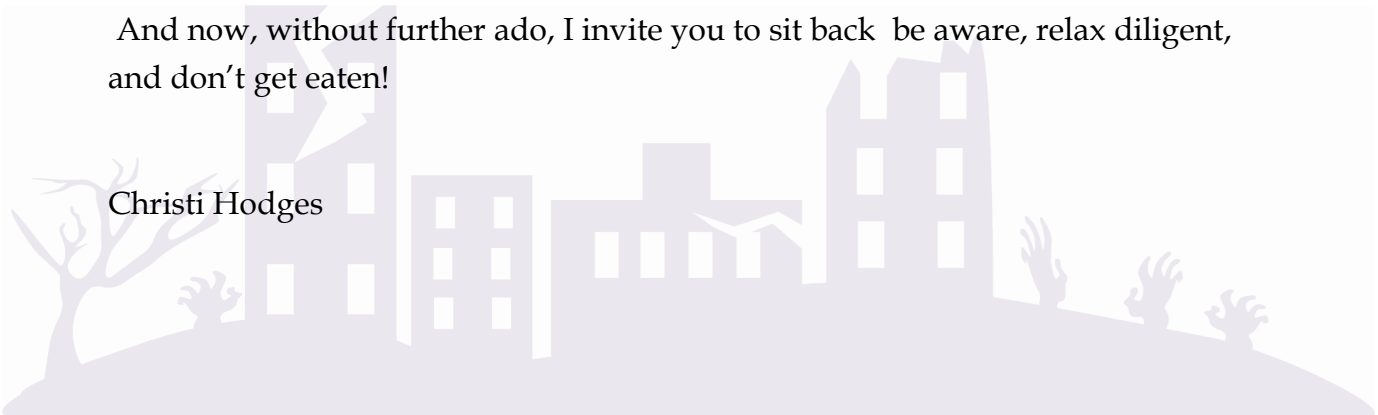

Thank you to our parents for sharing your children with me. We appreciate all that you've done with everything from picking up your child from rehearsals each night, to providing meals, helping with our Amazon wish list, painting, crafting, and more! I could not have done this without you. Students, your talent and dedication are amazing. I hope that your experience with this play has made you want to participate in plays, musicals and the performing arts in the years to come. It has been so rewarding to see the growth in each of you and how much you have learned during this theatrical process. Thank you all for sharing your talents with us.

We are excited to tour this production to Florida Theatre Conference in a few weeks, and then Jr. Thespians in December. We are excited to have the chance to show our amazing work to theatre students and professional adjudicators from all over the state of Florida and to receive feedback that we can apply to all theatrical work in the future.

We hope that you leave feeling prepared to survive a zombie apocalypse... because you never know when one will arise!

And now, without further ado, I invite you to sit back be aware, relax diligent, and don't get eaten!

Christi Hodges
