DiReCtOR'S NOtE:

For all its silliness and overt ridiculousness, The Addams Family has very auspicious roots in a long and pedigree literary career. Their creator Charles Addams, wrote the characters into existence in a series of cartoons for the respected magazine, The New Yorker, where the panels ran from 1938 until Addams' death in 1988. The comics gave rise to various television series, both live action and animated.

No matter what the medium, the Addams Family has never taken itself very seriously. Originally created as satirical representations of the ideal American family, the Addams are blissfully unaware that they stand out. Family is important and so is being yourself. This musical reminds us that "normal" is a difficult thing to define and that there is more that we have in common than there are that separate us.

As always, it has been my pleasure to serve as director for this production. As this year comes to an end, I'm reminded LNMS Theatre is a village of staff, students, and parent volunteers who work tirelessly to get the show off the ground. It is also a community that supports and encourages one another. Thank you all for attending today's performance and enjoy the show!
